

Hi, I'm the advisor of the school's newspaper, The Spray.

Why should you take a journalism course?

Think of high school journalism as an opportunity, as a doorway to a new world where strangers become acquaintances and acquaintances become friends.

It's a way to improve your writing skills and increase your knowledge, getting you to think about the world in a different light and expand your horizons. You become more open to asking questions and talking to students, faculty and community members. Self-discipline and the ability to meet deadlines are crucial for success in this program.
